From Humble Beginnings by Jeremy Holm

Morris Murdock Travel turns 55 this year, but our history begins with four Utah travel agencies...

In 1957, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints asked Franklin Murdock to form an agency to handle the travel needs of church employees and missionaries. On January 1, 1958, Murdock Travel opened its doors to handle travel for the LDS Church for over 30 years while quickly becoming the second largest travel agency in Utah. Murdock was known for its LDS-themed trips around the world and for organizing the travel of a worldwide missionary system which led to a reputation as the international travel experts in Utah.

Another company was born in 1958 when four young men who spent time in New Zealand were asked to coordinate a trip to the upcoming LDS New Zealand temple dedication. From that assignment, Beehive Tours & Travel was born. Barry Wride, Dick Lambert, Harper Wallace and Wilf Goodwill gave up their planned careers and turned to travel, filling many tours and cruises to the South Pacific and the Hawaiian Islands with weekly departures from Salt Lake City. Beehive Travel became one of the largest and oldest continuously operating, full-service travel agencies between Denver and the West Coast. Beehive’s reputation was built on decades of vision, innovation, and service to those who traveled on their tours, incentive travel groups, cruises, and personal and commercial trips.

In 1988, Beehive was acquired by Bonneville Travel, Inc., owned by Salt Lake City natives, Josephine and Mark Rose. The Beehive-Bonneville union created a travel business that offered a broad range of corporate, personal and leisure travel services. By 1995, this company had gross sales of $60 million, 150 employees, and offices in four states - Utah, California, Nevada, and Montana.

After working in the travel industry for several years, June Morris decided to start her own agency. Using the back room of her husband’s film processing company, she opened Morris Travel in 1970. June contacted businesses in the area and convinced them to give her their travel business. Due to its growth in 1984 Morris Travel started Morris Air with chartered flights to Hawaii and Mexico. Morris Air quickly grew to become a full-fledged airline operating in the Western U.S. and Mexico before it was sold to Southwest Airlines in 1995. By 1986, Morris Travel had grown to over $65 million in revenue, becoming the largest agency in Utah and the mountain states area.

During the late seventies and eighties, the travel business changed dramatically and in 1996, Morris Travel and Beehive Travel merged then in 2000, Morris Travel and Murdock Travel merged to become Morris Murdock Travel. With this merger, Morris Murdock Travel became the largest independent travel agency in the Intermountain area. In 2009, Morris Murdock was purchased by Simmons Media Group, LLC and the company now employs more than 100 travel professionals in Utah, Idaho, Wyoming, and Montana.

Morris Murdock Travel has several divisions:
• Morris Murdock Escorted Tours, offering group tours to historical sites and famous destinations around the world.
• Morris Murdock LDS Travel Study, offering LDS-faith based group tours to sites and destinations around the world.
• Morris Meetings and Incentives, is a full-service provider of incentive travel, corporate meetings, conventions/convention registration, conferences, executive retreats, and inbound destination management. MMI also provides clients on-line registration capability in multiple languages.
• Jenson Baron–Travel Express, a wholesale distributor of international airline tickets to travel agencies across the U.S.
• Black Pearl Luxury Services, a high-end concierge level travel service with a “Consider it Done” philosophy.
• SOLO, this program provides support for independent consultants and allows them to create their own “company” under the umbrella of Morris Murdock which provides access to booking systems, vendor relationships and industry training.

Today Morris Murdock is ranked as one of the top travel agencies in the Midwest United States and has received “Best of State” awards in Utah for ‘03, ‘04, ‘05 and ‘06.

We hope you enjoy the Morris Murdock Travel Show and we look forward to serving you! The world is out there waiting for you… Explore it your way!
